

ABSTRACT

A process for bending tempered glass. The process involves adhering two sheets of tempered glass in overlying relation and positioning a containment barrier such as vinyl sheets over the adhered unit. The glass is fractured and the unit manipulated into a desired shape. Once the adhesion has set, the vinyl is removed.